The jurors so far selected are accepting the situation in a philosophical manner. The plans of the defense, while they have not definitely developed, are believed to be, as at first supposed, emotional insanity and an appeal to the so-called "ligher law." Only the faintest indication in this direction has appeared at the trial thus far, and that was yesterday, when Clifford W. Harry Thaw told his counsel to-day that he was more than pleased with the jurors selected, and that he was more hopeful than ever of being acquitted. The Thaw jury spent the day cooped up in the Broadway Central Hotel under close guard of court officers. The most stringent watch is being kept on the men who have to bass upon Thaw's life. All communications addressed to the jurers are first read by court officers, and newspapers are clipped of all stories and references to the Thaw trial. Even magazine are subjected to careful censorship.

NEW YORK CITY, January 26 of the most important facts in the defense of Harry K. Thaw became known fense of Harry K. Thaw became known for the first time to-day, when a suite of rooms was leased in a big uptown hotel for eight witnesses coming from Pittsburg. The positive statement is made that Thaw called on Stanford White the night before he killed him and exacted from him a pledge that he would never again try to communicate with Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

That Thaw had met White and obtained from him this pledge, less than twenty-four hours before the tragedy, has been a carefully guarded secret of the defense. At dinner time, four hours before White was killed, Thaw intercepted a note from White, asking young Mrs. Thaw to meet him.

The defense is: "From the moment Thaw read that note and realized that White had broken his pledge and was still pursuing his young bride, his mind was a blank. He has no recollection of what intervened from then up until the following day, of the diamer at Martin's or of the shooting."
